They practice every Tuesday night in the Shepherdstown Train station from 6:30-9:00 PM. They welcome new recruits with strong knees and unscarred knuckles.

They perform on the streets of Shepherdstown to celebrate Mayday, Columbus Day weekend and during Christmas in Shepherdstown and travel to destinations in Canada, England and around the US to share their dances.

Tonight's fare was organized by the Hicks with Sticks.

Join the Northwest Team as they raise money for their expenses on Saturday, February 14 at the Upper Potomac Dulcimer Fest's Celtic Café Concert at the Shepherdstown Men's Club. That evening will feature lots of romantic French and European music on the hammered dulcimer, accordion, mandolin and more.

Les Barker may be the best writer of parodies and wordplays that the English-speaking world has ever heard. (Tom Nelligan, Dirty Linen). He is a masterful wordsmith, captivating listeners with his quirky verse and playful personality, touching on occasional tables, snails in a fast food restaurant and dachshunds with erections. His gallery of unlikely heroes included Cosmo the fairly accurate knife thrower, Arnold the Armadillo and Spot of the Antarctic. Truly a prince of the pun and sultan of the surreal. (Jo Laval). With numerous books and recordings to his credit, he delights audiences with his poetry, his humor and his absolutely brilliant delivery which will have you rolling in the aisles.

Nick Robertshaw

(alias Big Nick) is seen most often in this vicinity playing music for the Foggy Bottom Morris Men of Washington, DC. His tastes run far and wide and sometimes into the vulgar. He plays a repertoire that ranges from music hall to rock and roll, but is best known for his traditional repertoire of songs that delight and amaze with words that will tickle your fancy and chorus's aplenty to sing along with.

Relax to a cozy evening by the fire-side of O'Hurley's General Store's Great Hall. Drink a mug of hot mulled cider or a tankard of fine ale and enjoy the traditional revelry of the English fireside in winter with the witty poems of Les Barker and songs to elicit harmonies and laughter by Nick Robertshaw.

An admission fee of $15 includes a mug of cider or ale and delicious refreshments with an English Flavor. We encourage you to bring your favorite mug or tankard.

Tickets may be reserved and purchased at O'Hurley's General Store or through the mail.

Advance tickets or reservations are highly recommended, a second show may be added at 10PM if the first show sells out. Please let us know which show you'd prefer if we do two shows.
